Program Overview:

With the current speed of innovation and the introduction of many disruptive technologies, today's teens will have very different careers than their parents have. By 2030, it is estimated that over half the activities people are paid to do, and more than 60% of occupations, globally, could be replaced with automations or other technologies.

We must prepare our children of today, for the world, and workplace of tomorrow. The future will be tech-enabled both in start-ups and in new fields of work that require people to have unique capabilities, strong emotional intelligence, good communication skills, and an ability to adapt, persist, and think creatively all while maintaining a global and sustainability mindset.

This program is uniquely designed for teenagers, ages 14 to 17 with intermediate to advanced English skills. Through lectures, guest speakers, workplace tours, campus visits to some of Canada's top Universities, team projects, and independent study - the students from this camp, will learn about:

- The top 25 careers of the future
- The educational pathways and skills needed to attain careers in growing fields of work
- How engineering and technology are affecting even the most traditional businesses
- What it means to be an entrepreneur and have an entrepreneurial mindset, even if you don't own your own business
- The importance of sustainability and social enterprise, and how it can be applied to create an impact-based business
